Like water he seeks his own level,

The common level of life.

Loves living close to the earth,

Living clear down in his heart,

Loves kinship with his neighbors,

Dr. Cook, head of the English department, takes attendance as the first bus for Stratford prepares to leave.

The pick of words that

Why study English? When one stops to think, this becomes a relatively easy question. Our language is not static; it changes and grows with the times. English is the basis of our culture. A working knowledge of one's own language is the first requirement for study in any other field. Language is necessary for both communication and a better appreciation of great literary works. This is why we study English.

Ground breaking ceremonies for the new library took place last spring. The parking lot was then roped off, and steam shovels, iron beams, and workmen descended on the campus.

Songs, snores, and laughter prevented all studying in the busses headed for Stratford.

PAX

LA PAIX LA PAZ

The ability to communicate with people in foreign countries brings us closer to understanding their mores. The means of travel have helped us realize that we can no longer be content to speak just one language. Lack of communication separates people. Before lasting world peace can be achieved, this barrier to understanding must be eliminated.

Chemistry students have discovered most basic concepts are presented in lectures similar to the one above.

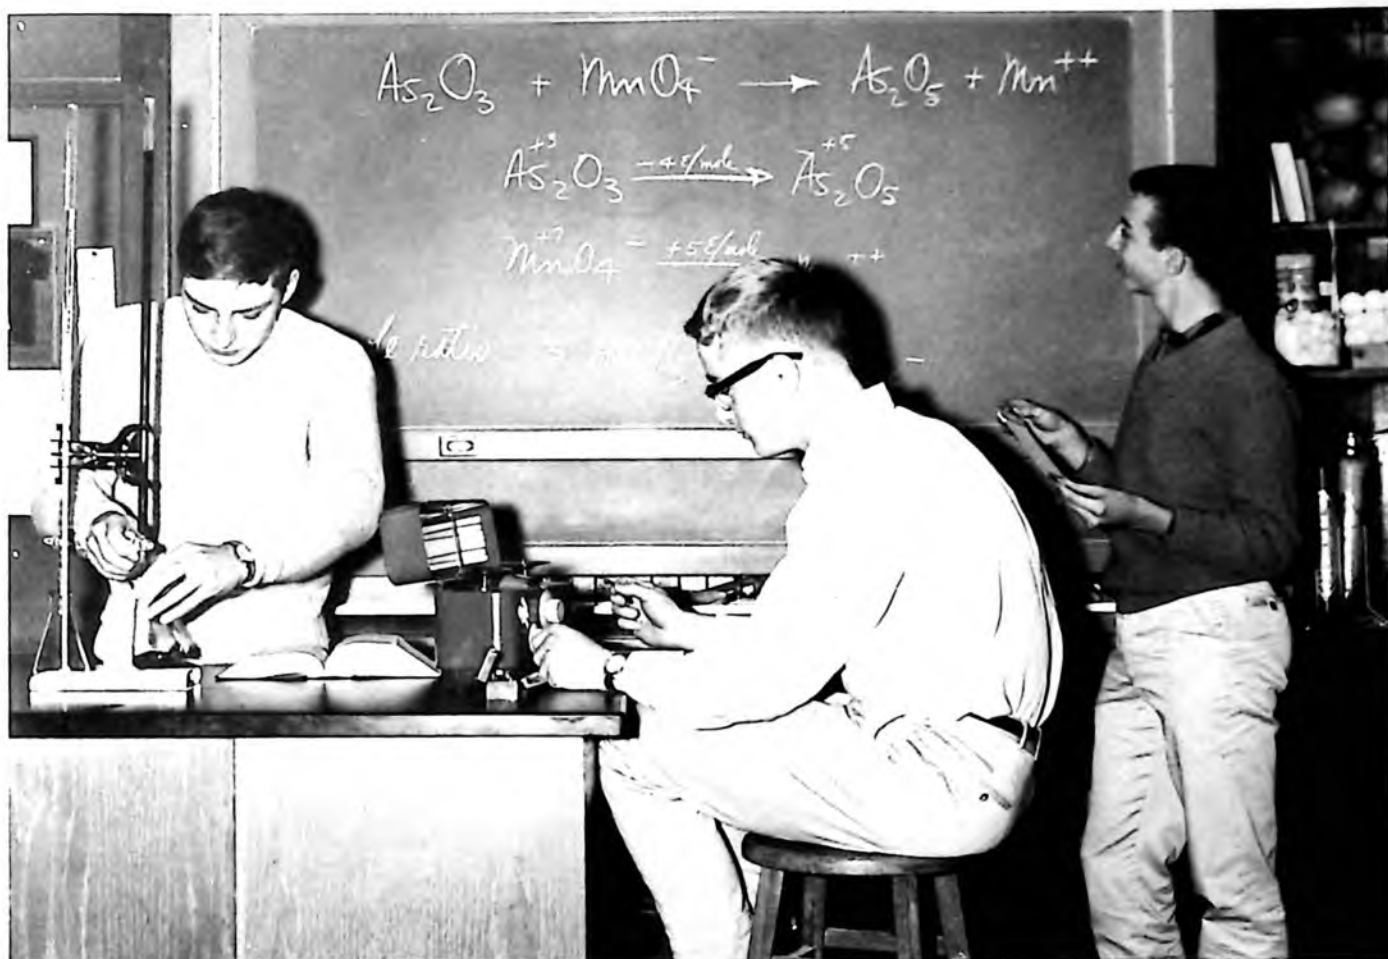

Studying plant life, biology students David Craft, Robert Bruce, Donna Wilson and Yvonne Schaudt make use of the department's excellent equipment.

Loves living close to the earth

1,429 students participate in the six course science program at Grosse Pointe High School, and are taught by twelve teachers. This year's major development is the Biological Sciences Curriculum Study course ( B S C S ) which is followed by one of the regular classes. Rather than pursuing the usual text-book approach, these students concentrate upon life at the cellular level and gain extensive laboratory experience. Several science clubs are maintained which cover all of the courses offered and provide more intensive opportunities for interested students. Science at the high school thus plays a significant and active role in the total curriculum.

Mr. Joseph Devine prepares to lead his B S C S biology class through a lab experiment in bacteria.

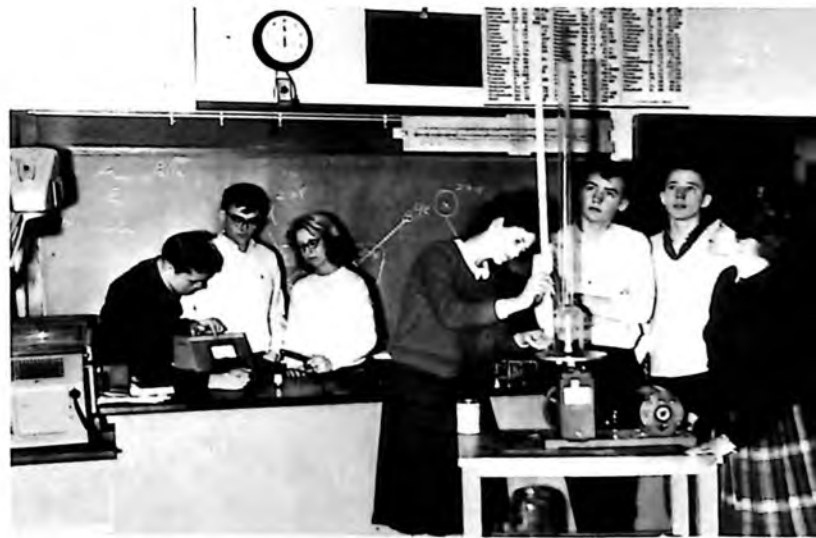

Advanced Placement Chemistry students, David Ingram, Dennis Grafflin and Barton Stuck, demonstrate a titration experiment.

Life Science students, Gordy Patterson, Toni Chopp, Paulette Wernet and Jim Lutz, explore the function of living organs through the dissection of frogs.

Robert Pickup, Mark Meadows, Diane Hassig, Elisabeth Jefferis, Robert Munson, Fred Williams and Kris Anderson present the use of the Geiger counter and the barometer to their physics class.

Taking advantage of our math seminar facilities, geometry students, Art Waters and Ralph Davis explore their individual interests.

Seven Grosse Pointe students were among the top 106 winners in the Michigan Mathematics Prize Competition. Seated: James Getchman, Robert Brammer (silver medal winner), Mr. Veenendaal, Tom Horn, Michael Nolan. Standing: Leonard West, Mr. Yerkes, Mr. Liechty, Peter Solenberger, and Barton Stuck.

Mathematics is one of the fastest growing and the most rapidly changing of all the sciences. Skip Soden receives a requisition for painting a sign from the assistant manager at the J. C. Penny Co.

Since typing is considered a communication tool, every student in high school learns to type. If a student pursues the co-op plan, his prerequisites are two years of typing, Retailing I and II, and office practice class. In his senior year he can obtain on-the-job experience either in retailing or office work. Retailing and office establishments in the Grosse Pointe and Detroit area furnish jobs to 40 students who earn while they learn.

Music in the Air

Grosse Pointe High School's choir yearly presents a winter and spring concert. It also performs for junior high schools, churches, and benefit clubs. Within the 128 membership, a smaller group known as the "Choraleers" was invited to sing for the Mid Western Music Teachers' Conference at Ann Arbor in January.

Membership to the musical organization is determined by spring auditions.

Mr. John Finch, director of the choir for 15 years, received the 1963 Citizen of the Year Award.

Rick Sabel, accompanied by the choir, sang "Some Children See Him".

Safari Sojourn

Excitement began with the parade. The Safari floated down Kercheval toward the high school, but even the birds, dragons and elephants didn't frighten Monroe. They still succeeded to capture the prize—one winning point. Disappointed but not downhearted, the Devils looked forward to the final event—the dance. Homecoming '63 turned the gymnasium into a jungle. Palm trees and native masks set Grosse Pointe High in the Safari mood.

Saturdays and fall forecast football. This year was no exception. Record crowds supported the three home games. The Devils opened the season with the traditional Ann Arbor game. They next journeyed to Port Huron where their only victory was achieved. The team lost its first league game at home to Royal Oak. Next the Devils encountered Fordson, but despite a good second half effort they lost. The team faced the defending champions, Monroe, for our homecoming game. The hard fought event was contested into the final minutes as we scored in the last two minutes, but failed to convert and tie the game. A discouraged Devil team lost the last league game to Wyandotte, and a final loss to Lincoln Park concluded a disappointing and defeating season for the Devil players.

Dick Green seems to touch the ceiling during one of his dives.

The 1963-64 basketball season was not as successful as other seasons, but it had its share of joys and sorrows. The Devils finished the year with a 6-12 record. They made, however, a strong comeback in the second half of the season, winning four of their last nine games and losing two others by a total of five points. The Devils beat all their BCL opponents except Wyandotte who earned the title. The team, winning only one of its away games, played much better on the home court. They closed out the season with a thrilling game in the state tournament which they lost by only one point.

Kinship through Intramurals

Volleyball encourages boys to use skills they have learned in class. Everyone hopes his team will win the class championship.

Boys' Intramurals promotes friendship and understanding as well as development in sports. At various times during the year, such activities as volleyball, handball, weight conditioning and many more are offered. For the boy who does not wish to be on a varsity team, Intramurals offers the same sports after school. Class competition is encouraged; the class which has the most participants in the Intramurals program wins the coveted Sweepstakes Trophy.

This year the Boys' Physical Education Department presented their version of the Olympics. Taking the Olympic Pledge before the competition began, the students participated for several weeks in such activities as discus and javelin throwing.

John Gilmore and Brian Davis help Chuck Bruce and Jim Kendall do their pull-ups.

Girls' Intramurals Promote

A good tennis game is an asset to any girl; Chris Munkholm perfects her skill.

The ball soars over the net as the team stands ready to assist.

Sportsmanship

Girls' Intramurals play an important part in our school. Many students improve skills they have learned in class, while others participate simply for fun. The program offered is so wide and varied that almost any girl can find the sport she likes best.

Inter-school competition is also a part of the program. Teams are chosen before each meet, and it is considered a privilege to represent our school. Each girl plays her best to win another victory for Grosse Pointe High School.

With what looks like a successful jump, this trackman raises our score.

Ready to jump, Russ Collins hopes to give the Devils more points.

Devil Trackmen Hail Spring

As the ice and snow of January give way to the wind and rain of March, spring sports at Grosse Pointe High School become a major factor in promoting school spirit. Large turnouts guarantee the high quality of athletics for which the Devils have become so well known. The interest and desire displayed by the participants leave no doubt that this year's track season will be one to be remembered.

Bat. . . Racket. . . Team. . . Swing

Temperature changes create new interests in seasonal sports. The Devils get out their uniforms and equipment from storage. Each year they practice diligently in order to fulfill their desire to win. Grosse Pointe has had the Border Cities League All-Sports Trophy for the last ten years. The trophy, awarded to the school which accumulates the greatest number of points during the school year, has become the permanent possession of the high school.

Tom Reed and Joe Reed alertly plan each move in order to win the game.

A weekly meeting of the executive council discusses problems common to all three grades.

Student Council officers, Sue Seder, secretary, Sue O'Connell, vice-president, Jim Hanna, president, and Bob Brammer, treasurer, preside over a general assembly.

of a well-run state

The Student Association acts as a liaison between the student body and the administration. When presented with a problem, it decides upon the best course of action and then makes recommendations to the faculty. It was organized with no intention of having great power, but merely as a means of communication between the students and the teachers. Individual classes work on projects while the entire Student Council works on policies common to the whole school. In the past, it has considered open campus, the smoking problem, and has planned several dances. This year it hopes to revise extra-curricular activities.

Student Council officers worked before and after school and at lunch selling S. A. tickets.

Student exchange programs on the high school level are a part of a total plan for international understanding. They have become an important means for developing a greater awareness of the urgent need for international co-operation on personal, school, community, and national levels. These teenage programs aim to provide experience in inter-cultural living at a time of life when such experiences are most likely to have a lasting influence.

Parents Included

Parents assume the student role for the annual Back to School Night. This evening gives families the opportunity to become acquainted with the courses and instructors. More frequently, mothers appear at Grosse Pointe High School because of their activities as members of the Mothers' Club. The major objective of this organization is to raise money for a scholarship fund to which it contributes fifteen scholarships yearly. Giving two seasonal teas and acting as patrons for the Pointe Players' productions help them achieve their goal. They also donated calendars and assembled material for homeroom distribution before school opened in the fall. In June, members of the Mothers' Club once again volunteer their services and organize the senior after commencement party.

The '64 Girls' Athletic Association officers are: Connie Egan, treasurer; Carolyn Romine, secretary; Ann Schmidt, vice-president; and Jane Joki, president.

Driver education cadet, Nancy Brown, instructs Mike Satmary.

Participation is an Important Role

There are many clubs which represent the varied interests of the students. Participation in outside activities fulfills a necessary aspect of student development. Clubs help make a well-rounded person; a person who has a certain responsibility as well as courtesy for his fellow students. Through membership in these clubs, students acquaint themselves with each other.

One of the two plays presented this year by the Pointe Players was "The Mouse That Roared."

Sallie Lichtenstein won first place in the Brotherhood Speech Contest. Margaret Comly was a winner in the National Council of Teachers of English contest. Ann Blenman received the Betty Crocker homemaking award.

The right timing of useful deeds

Dick Gibson, Gil Moorman, Cindy Gould, and Cathy Palmer, Red Cross officers, filled an overseas gift chest to which students contributed school supplies and hygiene items.

Suzi Teague, Ellen Boris, and Carla Gibson sold candy for the Kappa Y-teen service project, which is the Grosse Pointe Nursing Home.

Y-Teens, Hi-Y, Key Club, and Red Cross are active service clubs which affiliate themselves with school, community, and national projects. Unselfishly they donate their time, and individually give a part of themselves in performing many useful deeds. Their spirit of good will and sharing helps to develop a better feeling of brotherhood.

Publications

Each year, Miss Doris Trott and members of the journalism classes publish thirty issues of Tower. Sophomores, juniors, and seniors combine efforts to bring students at Grosse Pointe High School one of the nation's finest newspapers.

An inactive pulley in no way reflects the personnel responsible for an efficiently operated school. Five maintenance, heating, and ventilating engineers, twelve secretaries, and twenty-four cafeteria workers compose this corps. Often their services are overlooked. Students seldom realize the amount of preparation it takes to serve a well-balanced lunch. It is easy to forget that each night every classroom receives a thorough cleaning. Not often do we thank the secretaries and the book-store workers for their valuable assistance.
